Villa Spectre does not disappear into the landscape of Los Flamingos. It stands confidently within it. Set on a 1,420 m² plot with 515 m² of built space, this five-bedroom contemporary villa is defined by sharp architectural lines, dramatic volumes and expansive glazing that gives the property a distinctly modern presence. Bold without becoming excessive, the architecture balances scale with transparency, drawing the surrounding greenery, terraces and natural light into the home.

Inside, the approach is noticeably restrained. Warm timber, natural stone, neutral tones and tactile finishes soften the precision of the architecture, creating interiors that feel polished without feeling staged. Generous living spaces are designed for both entertaining and everyday life, while extensive glazing opens long perspectives towards the exterior. The contemporary kitchen follows the same clean architectural...
